

STRENSALL RAILWAY BUILDINGS Conservation Area No.31 (1.58ha)

Introduction

This conservation area was designated on 6 November 2001 following a request from Strensall and Towthorpe Parish Council.

History

The east end of Strensall was developed from the mid-1840's as a result of the building of the railway with its former station, and marks the first expansion of the village outside its historic core.

Important Buildings

The old station is a listed building, which forms a group with the signal box. It is the last remaining building of its kind on the York-Scarborough line.

Character

This is characterised by the late 19th century terraces of small brick-built houses erected for both the railway workers and those employed at the local brickworks.
